

Following the news that David Ayer will direct Margot Robbie in Gotham City Sirens, The Hollywood Reporter reveals that Warner Bros. is still developing a Suicide Squad sequel. There's no word on when it will happen or who will be at the helm, but this news should hardly come as a surprise considering the fact that the movie made $745.6 million despite a wave of overwhelmingly negative reviews. Interestingly, the trade adds that the studio is also developing a Deadshot spinoff starring Will Smith, though Gotham City Sirens is the project which is currently furthest along, hence why it's on the fast-track. Once again, it has not been revealed when that movie starts shooting or who might direct it. Deadshot is a movie which could head in any number of directions, and considering the fact that Smith was praised for his performance just as much as Robbie was, this makes a lot of sense! Which of these upcoming projects are you most looking

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/suicide\_squad/suicide-squad-sequel-being-developed-alongside-a-deadshot-solo-a147500