

Once again holding off the competition, Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 managed to beat new releases Super 8 and Mr Popper's Penguins at the UK box office this week, pushing Captain America: The First Avenger down to #4. Pulling in an impressive £2.8 million, Deathly Hallows: Part 2 is now the most successful UK release of 2011, having grossed £62 million since being released. It's not all bad for the Marvel Studios superhero though. At nearly £1.5 million, Captain America held on to a place in the top 5, and every little helps in ensuring the movie makes enough to get a sequel! With the release of Rise of the Planet of the Apes on Thursday (so far heavily promoted here) and Cowboys & Aliens next week, how much longer will Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 hold on to the top spot?

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=43981&t=iSuper_8_i_Fails_To_Topple_iHarry_Potter_And_The_Deathly_Hallows_Part_2_i_At_The_UK_Box_Office