

Is Tyler Hoechlin a better Superman than Henry Cavill? Many fans believe so, but regardless of which side of the fence you fall on, the response to his Man of Steel has been overwhelmingly positive so far. Whether or not that will lead to him getting a series of his own on The CW remains to be seen, but you can probably bet your life that he'll continue to appear on Supergirl after this first two episode stint. It turns out that the actor is every bit as humble as the character he plays because in a new interview with Comic Book Resources, he was quick to thank fans for the way they've been talking about his take on Superman. That's something both Warner Bros. and The CW must have noticed too, and while their focus is probably on the big screen version of the hero, here's hoping they prioritise this one too. "It's one of those things going into it where I
