

How did Marc Webb decide that he had found his Peter Parker? Cheeseburger eating skills! Ok, so there was a bit more to it than that. But while speaking to Yahoo.com, the director certainly gives a very unusual answer when asked the exact moment he knew Andrew Garfield was the right choice to play Spider-Man. He follows it up with more in-depth reasoning however, including the fact that he wanted a brand new face.. Matt McDaniel: For you, what was the moment when you just knew that Andrew was the right guy to play Peter Parker? Mark Webb: We tested a lot of really talented, wonderful young actors. And there was a moment when -- I mean this sounds ridiculous, but it's true. We were doing a scene that's not in the movie, where he was eating a cheeseburger and telling Gwen to like calm down or to -- trying

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsraints/news/?a=58028>