

Nacho Vigalondo (Timecrimes, Extraterrestrial) is back with another potentially brilliant oddity, which features The Dark Knight Rises' Anne Hathaway, and a bloody Kaiju. The movie is called Colossal, and it's about a despondent woman named Gloria (Hathaway) who somehow conjures and then psychically controls a giant monster that begins laying waste to Tokyo. In order to prevent further destruction, Gloria needs to determine why her seemingly insignificant existence has such a colossal effect on the fate of the world. The film premiered at Cannes last year to a generally favorable response, and based on the trailer below, it does certainly look... interesting, anyway. Gloria (Anne Hathaway) is a hard partying New York scene girl who is thrust into crisis when her boyfriend, Tim (Dan Stevens), grows sick of her antics and kicks her out of their apartment. With no other options, she moves back to her hometown and quickly regresses, drinking every night until last call and accepting a job at a bar owned

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/tdkrs-anne-hathaway-controls-a-giant-monster-in-the-first-trailer-for-a148314>