

Teresa Palmer (Wolf Creek, Triple 9, Hacksaw Ridge) was originally in line to play Batman villain Talia al Ghul in Mad Max: Fury Road director George Miller's Justice League: Mortal before the project was scrapped, and it seems the Aussie actress still has designs on the role. During an interview with Screen Rant, Palmer informed the site that she's officially campaigning to play Talia in Ben Affleck's solo Batman movie, and asked them to get the word out. Nothing wrong with that, of course, but there might be a slight problem there. According to The Wrap, Warner Brothers has no plans to include the character - nor her father Ra's - in The Batman, or in any other DCEU movie for the foreseeable future. This could have something to do with how prominently they factored into the overarching plot of Christopher Nolan's Dark Knight Trilogy, and also because of the mostly negative reaction to Talia (Marion Cotillard) in The Dark Knight Rises. Whatever

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/teresa-palmer-wants-to-play-talia-al-ghul-in-the-batman-but-the-character-a146290>