

The first footage from The Dark Tower is supposed to premiere at Entertainment Weekly's "Popfest" at the end of the month, but after the Taiwanese division of Sony Pictures uploaded an unfinished version of the international trailer for the movie to their channel, it's now doing the rounds across the web. To check it out while it's still available, a copy can be found by clicking here to head on over to Vimeo. Much of the trailer is devoted to Jake Chambers' journey from Earth to Mid-World, but there's a lot of great action featuring Idris Elba's Gunslinger as he takes on both The Man in Black's minions and some pretty terrifying looking monsters. Despite the fact that the movie is supposed to be a loose sequel to the books, there appears to be quite a few changes to the source material in this version of the story. Roland Deschain hasn't changed too much though, especially as this trailer ends with the immortal line,

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/the-amazing-first-trailer-for-the-dark-tower-starring-idris-elba-has-a145856>