

Andrew Garfield on almost suffocating in a particular scene: "I had to get wet, and I just kind of dove in and didn't realize that water on the mask made it impossible to breathe." "So I was kind of, like, suffocating," he says, getting wide-eyed and wheezing to act out the scene. "I couldn't get any oxygen! I water-boarded myself." He was helped by fight coordinator Andy Armstrong to free himself. Andrew Garfield has expressed on numerous occasions his passion for the character and admitted to being a huge Spider-Man fan and this is again evident when he says: "Since Stan Lee wrote the first panel and Steve Ditko drew the first drawing, that's what you want to be true to: the core of the character and the story," Garfield says. "I think the symbol of Spider-Man hangs over all of us." Martin Sheen spoke highly of the movie's star: "Garfield is also grittier."

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/6of13/news/?a=62252>