

The last we heard regarding filming for Joss Whedon's superhero actioner Marvel's The Avengers was that it's "on schedule and going well." And now, the folks at SHH have recently been tipped by 'EvilElvis' of a filming location in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Nothing to get too hyped for, besides it being new, the scooper offered the following: These were taking in Albuquerque, NM where they are filming the Avengers movie aka GH aka Group Hug. They have leased the old Santa Fe rail yard. Cheers! [Click Image to Enlarge] The images above may hint at an "India" setting for the scene. And with Marvel leasing the Santa Fe railyard, this doesn't confirm Albuquerque nor Santa Fe being the setting for scenes filmed there (check out the sanskrit signs), there is in fact a railway that connects the two. And doing a little digging, I found that the Southern Railway

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=36824&:t=THE\_AVENGERS\_Images\_from\_Albuquerque\_NM\_Set\_Reveal\_India