

Tickets for midnight screenings of Marvel's The Avengers have already gone on sale in New Zealand, but fans in the US will be able to nab their own when they are made available tomorrow. This was revealed via the official Facebook page earlier today. There's currently no information available about which sites these will be available on, although it's probably a good idea to keep your eyes on the likes of Fandango. Unfortunately, the fact they've used an image of the first official poster in the post makes it unlikely that the one they're giving away will be anything new. It is however still a nice little bonus for anyone eager enough to book their tickets this far in advance. Will you buy yours tomorrow?
