

The ever reliable "Quint" over at Ain't It Cool News has received word that the buzz surrounding The Avengers is extremely positive, with even those who weren't initially convinced now suitably impressed by what they've seen. This may substantiate unconfirmed (and overwhelmingly positive) reports from those claiming to have seen an early cut of the film. Word 'round the campfire is Marvel considers The Avengers to be their best outing yet. I've talked to some cynics in the group who weren't sure it was going to come together and they're all doing their mea culpas now. They say it has the heart, the action, the humor and the suspense a movie like The Avengers should have. The only criticisms I've heard is that Whedon's eye isn't as cinematic as it should be, but that the rest of the movie is so good that you accept it. After the footage in that Super

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=55131&t=THE_AVENGERS_Said_To_Be_Marvel_Studios_Best_Outting_Yet_But_Not_Cinematic_Enough