

According to Deadline, Universal has announced plans to delay the release of The Bourne Legacy by a week. It will now hit the big screen on August 10th, instead of August 3rd. This makes sense, especially as that release date would have pitted it directly against Sony Pictures' Total Recall remake. The studio are also taking into account the fact that The Dark Knight Rises will more than likely storm the box office as Marvel's The Avengers did earlier this year and hold the #1 spot for several weeks. Some last minute reshoots played no part in this decision according to the site, while the reaction to the fourth Bourne movie (although this one doesn't actually feature Matt Damon as the titular character) has apparently been a good one so far at test screenings. The narrative architect behind the Bourne film series, Tony Gilroy, takes the helm in the next chapter of

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=62192>