

For the most part, I'm not really all that keen on fan-made trailers for movies. More often than not, they just look shoddy, especially when we're talking about a release which hasn't even begun shooting yet! This effort for The Batman is pretty damn cool though, especially as it actually provides a story of sorts rather than just a random assortment of clips. Using footage from a variety of sources, we learn that Slade Wilson has managed to frame Batman, and that would definitely be interesting to see. Rumour has it that The Batman will be released in 2018, but it remains to be seen when we get our first official look at the highly anticipated release, especially as Ben Affleck is still working on the script. It's going to happen eventually though, so expect more details to be revealed in the coming months, especially now that the movie has its villain. Would you like to see The Batman follow a similar
