

In the new issue of Rolling Stone Magazine the actor talks about what you can expect in his third and final Batman film. He also chats about what made the role so enticing to him. When he was asked about a possible fourth film in series if The Dark Knight Rises was as successful as 2008's The Dark Knight and he replied: "No, this is the last of this Batman era. Unless Nolan wants to do another." Ready To Move On "It was like saying goodbye to an old friend. When you have the opportunity to play a role so many times, you develop another type of relationship with it, a more profound one. But I am ready to move on." Nolan Always Planned A Trilogy "Yes, Chris talked about the sequels the first time he opened his mouth. It didn't interest me to make more than one Batman, but it came out good and I

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=60530>