

Total Film have long been champions of the CBM, and always give (I find anyway) pretty accurate and fair reviews and ratings. I find them to be a lot more consistent than some other movie magazines at least. So I was very interested in seeing the top 50 movies they chose to stand as their greatest CBMs of all time. Below are their top 10, for the full list click the link at the bottom of the article..

#10) Kick-Ass What they say: The Comic Book: Mark Millar's semi-autobiographical 'what if?' reverie about his childhood dreams of fighting crime. The Movie: Matthew Vaughn's hyperactive action-comedy about an ordinary kid (Aaron Johnson) who decides to become a superhero. The Comic-Book Movie: Developed in parallel, comic and movie share a taste for bubblegum ultra-violence, sick laughs and unstoppable entertainment.

#9) When The Wind Blows The Comic Book: A graphic novel by Raymond Briggs, of The Snowman fame. Considerably darker than

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsranst/news/?a=39335&t=iThe_Dark_Knighti_Tops_Total_Films_50_Greatest_CBM_List