

On The Flash: “Warner Brothers is in the process of figuring out what their method is for releasing their superhero movies,” said Mazeau when asked about his draft of the planned live-action Flash movie. “They had ‘Green Lantern’ come out, and I think ‘Flash’ is high on the list of what would be next.” Encouraging news we heard in an earlier post on CBM. “It’s a matter of a lot of things coming together — the right story and the right filmmaker and the right sort of visual approach to Flash, because he can’t just be a guy who runs fast,” he said of the project, which would feature the Silver Age version of the character, Barry Allen. “That was important to me while I was writing my script. Fingers crossed, though — hopefully there will be some news soon.” Of course, Mazeau’s script was last on the development table in 2009 before

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=57182>