

Last time we saw Gorilla Grodd on The Flash, he'd been thrust through a breach to Earth-2 where he very fortunately found himself just outside the gates of Gorilla City. What became of him after that moment wasn't revealed, but if he made his way into the city, it's probably not a stretch to assume that he's learned a few things since his last encounter with the Scarlet Speedster. At the Television Critics Association's press tour yesterday, executive producer Andrew Kreisberg confirmed to those in attendance that the classic DC Comics villain will be returning in a major way this season: "We're going to have a two-part Grodd episode." The aforementioned two-parter will occur during episodes 13 and 14 of this current third year and while an airdate wasn't revealed, it's more likely than not that the pair of episodes will air late February and/or early March, ahead of the annual spring hiatus. In addition to Grodd, the episodes will also introduce a
