

Later this month, The CW will launch an epic crossover event which begins with Supergirl and continues in The Flash, Arrow, and Legends of Tomorrow. Not a huge amount is known about what we should expect right now, though the first official images were released earlier today and now a promo has found its way online featuring brand new footage from the highly anticipated four night event. In it, we get to see Barry Allen introducing Supergirl to Team Arrow and the Legends, and Felicity seems particularly excited about the heroes all teaming up! What brings all of these DC Comics icons together? Well, they'll be squaring off against alien invaders known as the Dominators. They want to harvest Earth's metahumans in order to create their own, and that's something which will lead to characters from the worlds of the shows listed above coming together in order to take them down. Are you looking forward to the "Heroes v Aliens" DC TV crossover? Share
