

Left for dead in an ambush with five other Texas Rangers, lawman John Reid (Armie Hammer) survives and is nursed back to health by an Indian scout named Tonto (Johnny Depp). He then dons a mask to avenge the murders of his comrades and to foil evildoers, never accepting payment for his services. His gratis vigilantism is made possible by the silver mine he inherits from his slain brothers - the same mine that affords him his endless supply of trademark silver bullets. Armie Hammer chats with Access' Billy Bush at the "Mirror Mirror" press junket about taking on the title role in "The Lone Ranger." What's it been like working with Johnny Depp and Jerry Bruckheimer? Plus, how close are they sticking to the original TV show? The Lone Ranger will be released in theaters May 31, 2013. The film stars Armie Hammer as The Lone Ranger and Johnny Depp as Tonto.
