

TV Line's source is reporting that the show will now be called Mockingbird Lane. This is a nod to the address that The Munsters move to which becomes their new home. Not sure why they decided to leave out the 1313 part of the address, but whatever. If you'd like to read a ton of spoilers on the new show click here. Sources confirm to TVLine exclusively that the title of the pilot — which is being stewarded by Pushing Daisies creator Bryan Fuller and X-Men auteur Bryan Singer — has been changed from The Munsters to Mockingbird Lane. The new handle is, of course, a nod to the family's iconic Victorian abode, which is situated at 1313 Mockingbird Lane. The project is currently in the casting stage, so there's still time for Fuller/Singer/NBC to consult our dream picks for Herman, Lily and the rest of the creepy brood.
