

Hey gang, Morty here with something I'd like people to think about and discuss. The Translation debate. Many times, over and over since the release of X-men (2000) I have heard this statement- "That does not translate to screen" I personally believe everything translates. Because if it does not, nothing rationally translates. Xmen and Batman fans are notorious for saying certain characters do not translate to screen, Or are not plausible to a mass audience. How can Batman's cowl work, but not Wolverines? Both are ridiculous if you over scrutinize. But I can buy that as heroes living outside the law they Need to be symbols and protect their identities. I have a harder time believing they can stroll around without masks on, break laws, use super powers and not have their lives turned upsidedown from being identified. Why does one work and the other does not? GIFSoup The same goes for Night Owl. His suit worked, is it because he
