

Going to see Twilight: Breaking Dawn-Part 1? Yeah, me neither. It's funny though that the film is doing it's best impersonation of a Marvel Studios movie by copying the marketing ploy of having a post-credits teaser scene that ties directly to it's next film. Should we be outraged by this contamination of the pure and holy institution that is known as the Marvel Cinematic Universe post-credit teaser? If anything, I think this is a signal to Marvel that the novelty of their grand marketing ploy, the one brilliant stroke that set this whole thing off.... has sadly worn off. When the likes of Twilight start copying your ideas, it's time to come up with some new ones. I do have to point out that Marvel is not the first to have post-credit scenes or stingers as there also sometimes called. Hellboy, Daredevil, and X-Men: The

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=49985&t=emThe_Twilight_Saga_Breaking_Dawn-Part_1em_Does_Its_Best_emAvengersem_Impersonation