

If you're still mad at Daryl for what happened to Glenn in the season seven premiere of The Walking Dead, chances are you didn't feel too sorry for him after tonight's episode of the AMC series. Regardless, things look set to get very difficult for Rick Grimes and the residents of Alexandria in seven days as Negan makes his presence felt in the community and starts throwing his weight around. "Service" will be a ninety minute episode, so chances are something big is going to happen. It's also worth noting in the clip below that Eugene is toying around with a radio. Fans of the comic book series will know that's a major plot point which is currently playing out, so it should be interesting to see how the show handles that. What did you guys think of tonight's instalment of The Walking Dead?
