

It's probably been a while since we've seen a really great Spider-Man movie action figure, but that seems ready to change with this summer's release of Jon Watts' Spider-Man: Homecoming, which has a very impressive upcoming lineup of high-quality toys attached. Yesterday, Medicom unveiled the first photos of their new Spider-Man MAFEX Figure, which is based on the web-slinger's appearance in Captain America: Civil War and Spider-Man: Homecoming. The 6" tall figure shows off nearly every little detail of Spidey's new suit and features over 30 points of articulation, making it one of the most poseable Spidey figures in recent memory. The ultra poseability allows buyers to pose their figure into a wide range of the wall-crawler's most classic stances. The package will also include two masked head sculpts, an unmasked head sculpt, interchangeable hands, a web effect piece, a mask accessory and an adjustable figure stand. The figure has been slated for an October release and will retail for 6,800 Yen (about $60 USD). On
