

The latest casting calls for Alan Taylor's sequel to Thor is in need of women with "hot bodies," that don't mind wearing skimpy costumes. Ah... sometimes it's good being a casting director. The production is also looking for men and women with military experience to be in the film. Next bits of casting were actually put out in May, but most didn't know that they were associated with Thor 2 so they went by the wayside. In those calls there was a need for people heavily tattooed, with a special need for facial ink. And last but not least a call for basically anyone with an unusual face. They want it all. If you have a scar, you're in. If you have large nose, ears, or parts of your face missing, you're in. Keep in mind all of these are for extras that live near London. Men & Women with Military
