

Now taking place beyond the eyesight of potential paparazzi, principal photography is still in full swing for Marvel's Thor: The Dark World. And according to Shepherd Management Limited casting agency, 2 of their notable clients have signed on for the anticipated Alan Taylor-directed sequel. They've announced that British actor Clive Russell & Welsh-American actor Richard Brake have unspecified, but presumably minor, roles in the film. Clive Russell, 66, has appeared in Guy Ritchie's Sherlock Holmes and its 2011 sequel, numerous British television series, and he was recently cast as Ser Brynden Tully the Blackfish in HBO's 3rd season of Game of Thrones. Richard Brake, 47, is best known for playing the DC character Joe Chill in Christopher Nolan's Batman Begins. And he's also appeared in Hannibal Rising, Water for Elephants, & alongside Ray Stevenson in Outpost. From left to right: Richard Brake, Clive Russell Other news related to Thor: The Dark World,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=67660>