

The Dark Knight was a hit with both fans and critics, as well as the first comic book movie to make $1 billion at the box office. While a lot of the attention which surrounded the film was due to the tragic death of Heath Ledger, his performance as The Joker would eventually win him a posthumous Oscar, while the effect of the film on both cinema and comic book movies was undeniable. Here, some of the best creative talents in the industry look back on The Dark Knight. To read the rest of the comments from the likes of Wes Anderson, Peter Berg and David Koepp, be sure to pick up the latest issue of Empire Magazine. Tim Burton "I like Chris Nolan's Batman movies. It kind of makes me laugh because I got so much shit for being too dark and now, with him, it's like, 'Lucky you.' But that's

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=61393>