

Roaming the net, I stumbled across a few things relating to the superhero team up of a lifetime, The Avengers; things that aren't quite groundbreaking, but should get you excited nonetheless. Check the "small print" below. First up, according to Total Film, Tom Hiddleston was in London yesterday promoting The Avengers by introducing the recent theatrical trailer before a crowd of John Carter viewers. Tom commented saying, "I am very proud of the film, but I can't take credit for the trailer myself. This is the work of the brilliant Joss Whedon." Second, thanks to LEGO.Wikia, a closeup on the minifigures based on Captain America and a "General" and "foot soldier" of Loki's mystery alien horde in Marvel's The Avengers has been revealed. Third, despite having more than enough toys to collect from LEGO and Hasbro, among others, make way for tiny "Squinkies," modeled

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=56084>