

Talking to Elle Magazine, Tom Hiddleston has touched briefly upon how the 'Group Hug' codename used during filming for The Avengers was far more relevant to the project than you might think. "All of the actors in 'The Avengers' are so nice. Marvel has these code names for projects and the code name for 'The Avengers' was Group Hug. It felt very much like a group hug on set." With so many well know actors all sharing the screen, were there any clash of egos? Well, as hard as it may be to believe, most definitely not according to the actor: "For the first 10 minutes after you meet them, they have the wattage and charisma of movie stars. Then you have a coffee with them and you realize we're all the same, we're all just people." Asked what his favourite part of working on the Joss Whedon helmed superhero ensemble was,

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=50635&t=Tom_Hiddleston_Describes_Scene_Filmed_At_NASA_Facility_In_THE_AVENGERS