

Following his previous interview, where Tom Hiddleston speaks highly on Loki's presence in Marvel's forthcoming The Avengers, Cinema Bland have unveiled their interview with the Thor actor. Speaking more on secrecy, the character's psychology, and the evolution of his motives, check it out below. How do you handle not being able to tell people details about what you're doing? [laughs] I quite simply don't tell anyone. It's very hard, because it's just so exciting, and especially when you're right in the middle of it. Exactly a year ago we'd finished – the main shoot for Thor was January to May 2010 – and I went back to London and I hadn't seen my friends for six months. And they were like, "So how was it?" And I would say, "I can't tell you other than the fact that it was awesome!" Well, now with The Avengers you have even more time with that level
