

We've known since Doctor Strange's mid-credits scene that Benedict Cumberbatch's Sorcerer Supreme would likely appear in Thor: Ragnarok, and while it's since been kinda sorta confirmed, Tom Hiddleston made it official on the red carpet of the Golden Globes last night. While he wasn't willing to give too much away, the British actor did shed some light on what we should expect from the magical hero. "Doctor Strange has intensely cerebral time-bending powers," Hiddleston teased. "At the end of Thor: The Dark World, Loki's on the throne...what happened to Odin? So, maybe Doctor Strange has to help out with that particular conundrum." That's not a major revelation, but it may narrow down exactly what Strange will be up to, especially as some believe he may also enter the gladiatorial arena. Be sure to watch the full interview below as Hiddleston also teases his role in Kong: Skull Island! new #GoldenGlobe winner
