

In a recent interview with Zap2it, the actor was asked to share his thoughts on the pilot of Smallville, his experience filming that episode and how he and the show have progressed over the past decade. To read what Welling had to say about CW series, Hellcats (which he executively produces) click on the link below. "I've revisited the pilot a few times, sometimes by accident, other times for research, and I'm always amazed how far we've come. I'm 10 years older and 30 lbs. heavier -- I don't know how that happened! -- but I think the pilot still holds up. It doesn't necessarily look dated or out-of-touch." "David Nutter, who directed it, really had a good sense of what it needed to be. He executed it fantastically, but I remember thinking, 'Somebody tell me what to do.' I had no idea. Looking back now, I know that David created a warm,

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=34692&t=Tom_Welling_Looks_Back_On_The_First_Ever_Episode_Of_Smallville