

During Cineplex Magazine's set visit in Toronto, the stars of Total Recall were asked some very interesting questions about their characters, the experience of the film and how it is different from the 1990 film starring Arnold Schwarzenegger. Although most quotes are from Colin Farrell, Jessica Biel serves a good description of her character. Q: The characters you play were in the original movie, but have they changed much here? How would you describe them? Farrell:"I play Doug Quaid, who, very much like in the original, is a member of the proletariat, fairly low-level blue collar worker in a really good factory scheme. This is a man, Quaid, that doesn't feel like he is living the life that he should be and it just doesn't add up...And he begins to be told, and shown, that he's actually not who he thought he was, and that he's been a pawn in a much bigger

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/TheAlexLynch/news/?a=64498>