

We've actually had quite a few trailers released recently, but it was the new/first looks at 3 of next year's biggest comic book flicks that caused the biggest commotions here on CBM. First out of the gate was 20th Century Fox and James Mangold's Logan, which delivered a brilliant, but melancholy teaser set to the strains of Johnny Cash's cover of "Hurt." Then, James Gunn provided fans with a welcome return glimpse into the lives of Star Lord and his band of intergalactic A-holes with an awesome new trailer for Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2. And finally, we had the very first teaser (well, we actually got 2, but we're sticking with the domestic one) for Marvel and Sony's Spider-Man: Homecoming, which featured our first look at Michael Keaton's Vulture in action, and, of course, those much-discussed web-wings. A few nitpicks aside, the majority of you guys seemed to be very happy with all of the above - but which one did

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/trailer-battle-spider-man-homecoming-vs-guardians-of-the-galaxy-vol-a147589>