

Christopher Nolan is still rounding up talent to fill roles in his final Batman movie, The Dark Knight Rises. Recently Juno Temple was confirmed in an unknown role, and now it seems that Treat Williams was up for a part too. He may not be able to do it though, given what he says in an interview with Zap2it.. Williams tells the site.. "I think 'The Dark Knight Rises' came up before ['Against the Wall'] was set, because that might take me into September. I think that would be a direct conflict. But we should all have such problems, right? You may(if your over 25:) remember Williams from his insane turn in Things To Do In Denver When Your Dead and from the incredibly crap but still kinda good Leviathan. More recently he appeared in 127 Hours and TV's Everwood. Williams also says that his tv work may keep him from a role in

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=34042&t=Treat_Williams_Up_For_A_Role_In_TDKR