The folks over at What's Playing have managed to talk with a couple of sources close to the production of Zack Snyder's Superman, including actress Kristina Anapau, who recently revealed interest & hints that she auditioned for the female lead. The site also spoke to their WB "contact", who offers a bit of an update. Firstly, chatting with actress Kristina Anapau, she says: "I don't know what I can tell you - you're very warm...all of the names on your previous list were or are still in the running for this role last I heard. They're swaying between big names and smaller names. I can't tell you specifics of the role - I don't know what I can say, sorry". And on to their WB contact, who says he hasn't read the script so don't know what role these ladies are fighting for. When senselessly asked whether Variety's recent contenders were true, he says: "Things
