

Off the heels of learning that India will be watching next summer's most highly-anticipated superhero movie, The Avengers, before the United States, I headed over to the Facebook page promoting the country's release. And it seems we may have a new international trailer to look forward to over the weekend. At least that's what the below graphic points at. Check it out!

UPDATE: The graphic below has been mysteriously altered now assuring that the trailer will be an "exclusive," and evidently new. And there are also specified channels listed where the supposed trailer will be debuting. Something else strange is that the original source of the graphic has removed it from their Facebook page. Unfortunately since this is only an assumption, there's a downside. And that downside could be that this "trailer" may just be the one that debuted in October, breaking iTunes records. However, something that makes me believe

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=50916&t=font_coloredUPDATEfont_New_International_THE_AVENGERS_Trailer_Debuting_In_The_Coming_Days