

Click on images to enlarge. The online video game producer Bigpoint has revealed the title to their newest massively-multiplayer online game. It will be called Game of Thrones: Seven Kingdoms and will be free-to-play. The game will be set in the Seven Kingdoms of Westeros which means players will definitely be able to experience their favorite moments from the television series. The trailer for the video game will debut at San Diego Comic Con. Max Pfaff - producer of Bigpoint - had this to say: "Selecting a game's title can be quite an arduous process, especially in the free-to-play space where games must be easily discoverable by players around the world, By selecting Game Of Thrones: Seven Kingdoms we're confident that we've chosen an identifiable name that will resonate with the global community of diehard Thrones fans."
