

My Spidery sense was tingling the second it was announced that Felicia Hardy a.k.a. The Black Cat would be featured in the upcoming tie-in video game to Marc Webb's The Amazing Spider-Man. Here's why my inner detective instantly zeroed in on this possibility--- 1.) Marc Webb has stated numerous times that his take on Spider-Man will tell a different story than Sam Raimi's trilogy and a big element of Spidey's lore missing from Raimi's film's was Felicia Hardy and The Black Cat. 2.) Unlike other tie-in video games, this latest Beenox Studio effort picks up directly after the events of the film. If I had to make a guess, I'd say Oscorp takes Doctor Connors research and continues experimenting, hence the game's take on the Rhino and the Iguana. 3.) Beenox has developed the game with both Sony and Marvel providing oversight meaning that decisions were not frivolously made when selecting
