

EA and Dice have today released a trailer for their upcoming &quot;Rogue One: Scarif&quot; DLC pack which is based on a planet which from Gareth Edwards' Rogue One: A Star Wars Story. It was recently revealed that Season Pass holders will be able to get their hands on that on December 6th. Everyone else however is going to have to wait until a little later on December 20th. However, based on what we see here, it'll be worth it, especially as it should add at least a few extra months of enjoyment to the game. Jyn Erso and Orson Krennic will be the new playable heroes, while the pack will include a new multi-stage game mode that spans land and space, along with four additional maps. We get a glimpse of that in the trailer below, and more will hopefully be revealed in the coming weeks. This is the final update for Star Wars Battlefront, and the sequel is expected to be released around this
