

Vin Diesel recently wrapped filming on his third film in the Riddick franchise, which is aptly titled, Riddick. During production he was very active with updates, posting information and photos from the set. Just today the actor has written a new message on his Facebook page that indicates Riddick won't be released in 2012, but actually 2013. He also said that Universal is happy with what they've seen so far and are interested in making two more down the road. "The studio said the earliest they could release the new "Riddick" is in January... was hoping for 2012... but, it's on the horizon. P.S. I think they are liking what they are seeing... haha, cause they asked when both Underverse and Furya would be ready to make and release... haha... now that's a ways in the future but it is exciting." Thanks to the heads up from Paul Romano. The infamous Riddick has been left
