

Don't expect Tom Holland's wall-crawler to ever tangle with Vincent D'Onofrio's Kingpin. The somewhat contentious relationship between Marvel TV and the Marvel Cinematic Universe has been on the record for quite some time so this new should surprise no one. But what about the Kingpin showing up in The Defenders, which is currently filming in NYC right now? Any chance of Kingpin showing up in a future Spider-Man film? That I doubt. Seems to be so many characters in the film uni to service. The films are already jam packed.

<https://t.co/q2YyClpynH> — Vincent D'Onofrio (@vincentdonofrio) December 18, 2016

On the possibility of Kingpin showing up in The Defenders? No chance

<https://t.co/fGqoY6tljt> — Vincent D'Onofrio (@vincentdonofrio) December 18, 2016

Earlier this year, Vincent stated that he already knows when Kingpin will return but he obviously can't give away the answer. The most obvious next appearance would be Jon Bernthal's Punisher series as those two obviously have unfinished business. But in that same interview, D'Onofrio also stated that anytime Jeph Loeb calls

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/vincent-donofrio-says-no-chance-kingpin-shows-up-in-spider-man-a147587>