

After tonight's episode, The Flash will take a one-week Election hiatus before returning with a brand new episode and it looks like it's one that's been a long time coming. We were quickly introduced to Wally West's Kid Flash during the season three premiere, but he unfortunately met his untimely demise not long after the fact, which led to Barry taking a trip back to the worst day of his life to set things right. However, as we all know, that didn't exactly work out like he planned and while Barry's been dealing with all-new metahumans, Wally has been feeling just a tad underutilized, especially after discovering that the Speed Force has embraced Jesse Quick, but not him... at least not yet. The CW has released fifteen promotional stills from episode six, titled "Shade," which spoil a meeting between Wally & the mysterious Dr. Alchemy, and considering what Alchemy's been up to these past few weeks, could certainly mean that Wally may be
