

Warner Brothers Animation announced its next animated film that will come after Green Lantern: Emerald Knights and Batman: Year One. Justice League: Doom will be released in 2012 and will be the last work of the late Dwayne McDuffie. It will be loosely based on Mark Waid's JLA story The Tower of Babel. Tower of Babel centers on the perceived betrayal of the Justice League by Batman, whose secret files detailing the weaknesses of his colleagues fall into the hands of Ra's al Ghul. He uses the information to incapacitate the League while distracting Batman with the theft of the bodies of Thomas and Martha Wayne. The revelation that the Dark Knight had devised contingency plans to defeat each of his teammates naturally creates friction, leading the JLA to consider expelling him from their ranks. There has been no news on casting or actual release date. Waylon: Personally Tower of Babel is one of

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=34442&t=Warner Borthers Animation Announces iJustice League Doom As Their Next Project