

With Zack Snyder busy with Justice League, a low budget thriller, and possibly even Justice League 2, if the filmmaker does take the helm of a Man of Steel sequel, it means we'll be waiting a very long time for it to happen. The movie was announced way back when Warner Bros. announced their DC Films slate, but we've heard nothing official since then other than the fact that is indeed still in the works. It will happen eventually, but for now, we have this awesome fan-made trailer (via WGTC) for a follow-up titled Man of Tomorrow. Injecting some much needed optimism into the franchise, it pits Superman against Brainiac and Metallo, something fans have been waiting a very long time to see on the big screen. If only it were real, eh? As always, be sure to let us know your thoughts on this video below.

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/superman_movies/superman_the_man_of_steel/we-finally-get-the-superman-weve-all-a147492