

Most fans are not thrilled with the idea of a remake of The Crow, myself included and with news that Bradley Cooper was in talks for the lead role, I was not enthusiastic. My own opinions aside, the film has had its troubles getting into production. Now, it looks as if a lawsuit, filed by the Weinstein Brothers, has been filed against Relativity media regarding the distribution rights of The Crow property. Bert Fields is repping Harvey and Bob's The Weinstein Co against Ryan Kavanaugh's Relativity Media seeking injunctive relief and claiming there's "a written contract signed by everybody" which gives the Weinsteins exclusive worldwide distribution rights on The Crow reboot. The two parties had gone back and forth today before the suit was filed, trying to hammer out a deal, but ultimately, Mr. Kavanaugh would not agree to the deal and is looking to sell the rights to others. Obviously, if

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/geekboymovienews/news/?a=35629&t=Weinsteins_Suing_Relativity_Media_Over_iThe_Crow_i_Remake