

Editorials should not be taken lightly. They're not just well-articulated opinion pieces, but statements that desire to ignite discussion and debate with a clear-cut, direct path. An editorial is one author saying to an audience, "This is my take in a logical, coherent medium, and I wish for you to take its contents into consideration, as this is not a fleeting thought, but something I find absolutely worthy of its own novel stature." Learn the difference between a comment and an editorial. Editorials have clear directions and are often composed of more than one thought or direction. They approach a subject in a light that is meant to resonate with a specific audience. Either that, or an editorial is a constructive analysis of a specific subject, listing the elements that compose said subject and reflecting upon the pros and cons of them. It's important to understand the difference between an "opinion"

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/SoHelpYouGod/news/?a=65974>