

The executive producer team of Andrew Kinsberg, Marc Guggenheim and Greg Berlanti have been pretty consistent in stating that while virtually the entire roster from DC comics are on the table for cameos, they're grounding Arrow in reality and staying away from fantastical characters like Superman, Green Lantern and.....Wonder Woman. Well, that was before the news story dropped that the CW was developing another super hero origin series but this time focusing on Wonder Woman. Allan Heinberg is currently developing the show which was described as "Wonder Woman as a young, budding superhero, rather than a fully formed defender of liberty." This could all be premature as the CW has only committed to a script at this point but if a show is greenlit a crossover episode seems inevitable. Said Executive Producer Andrew Kinsberg about the chances of a crossover- "Our show definitely takes place in a much more realistic

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=67052>