

The Incredible Hulk never got a sequel, and while Bruce Banner has made his presence felt throughout the Marvel Cinematic Universe since then, there's been no sign of Liv Tyler's Betty Ross. Could that change with the massive Avengers: Infinity War? Well, the Scottish Daily Record has a piece up about the movie shooting there soon, and they may have revealed that the actress will be reprising the role. "Brie Larson of 21 Jump Street fame is expected to play Captain Marvel, while Liv, daughter of Aerosmith rocker Steven, is rumoured to be playing her Incredible Hulk character Betty Ross. Inverness-born Karen [Gillen], 29, is reportedly preparing to star as galactic supervillain Nebula." They don't indicate where this information has come from (for all we know, they could have pulled it straight off a quick Google search), but it does sound like they may have heard some solid intel here. Time will tell, but Nebula showing up in Avengers: Infinity War does make sense,

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/avengers/avengers_infinity_war/will-the-incredible-hulks-liv-tyler-return-in-a148011