

Talking to Digital Spy, Willem Dafoe has finally shared his thoughts on The Amazing Spider-Man; the upcoming reboot from director Marc Webb. The actor has seemingly been a little reluctant to discuss the movie when asked about it during the John Carter press tour, and his response here may just explain why. "It's funny, I really enjoyed working on Spider-Man, but when I was finished with it, it really kind of completed something for me. Maybe. I don't really have an opinion one way or another to tell you the truth." "I think Spider-Man is probably the most widely seen movie I've ever done. But then there's other movies - It really depends on their age. It's interesting, you can tell from someone's background usually. What is the period they go to see movies and what kind of movies they see. How they see you is clearly a reflection of the kind

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=55943>